

Douglas

Course Objectives/Learning Outcomes/Standards-in-view g experiences with infants ties to: In Nursing Practice IV, clients' experiences with complex episodic health challenges, including and children are emphasized. Students have opportuni actively participate in the construction of their ways of knowing through experiential development caring relationships with people experiencing complex episodic health challenges knowledge from late natural sciences within a caring context safely through their ability to perform more advanced practice skills, including effective clinical making increasingly self-directed practice decision become

Overview

Nursing Course Content

ce IV, clients' experiences with increasingly complex episodic health challenges and healing are

In Nursing Practi

cepts from all courses within each woman's life axis seminars. Clinical agency experience occurs in medical-surgical course includes nursing practice experience and bra ence family (1 contact) a family experiencing an episodic health challenge (1 visit over two semesters) and (1 generat over two semesters): Students engage clients and their families experiencing common and predictable episodic

